CLAIMS

If any, must be made on receipt of plants when they will be carefully examined and, if just, all will be made satisfactory. I send out only good plants, in good condition, carefully packed, but success or failure depends in so large a degree upon the care and management after received, that I do not, because I cannot, guarantee plants to live.

Sometimes we are sold out entirely of certain varieties even before the digging season begins. If it so happens we are sold out of any variety you order, can we substitute with another variety?
